

Bio – Aimee Todoroff – Director for Echoes in the Garden – March 2020

Aimee Todoroff is a director practicing theater in NYC. She has been a part of two Obie Award winning productions, as a performer and as a director. She loves directing in traditional and non-traditional, site specific and immersive spaces. Equally adept at classic and new work, Aimee has helmed plays by Ibsen, Chekhov, and Brecht, and premieres by Cusi Cram, Daisy Foote, and frequent collaborator Chris Harcum, among others. Aimee received her MFA in Directing from Southampton Arts, studying with Marsha Norman, Nick Mangano, and Rinde Eckert, has trained with the famed SITI Company and with master teacher and director Karen Kohlhaas, and was the Assistant Director for John Rando and the playwright David Ives for Classic Stage Company's production of "The Heir Apparent." She is the artistic director of the indie theater company Elephant Run District, and is passionate about collaborative dialog between artists, audience and communities. In addition to directing and teaching, Aimee created the LIT Anti-Harassment Toolkit, is a frequent speaker on best practices to create safe creative spaces and is the Acting Director of the League of Independent Theater.
